HISTORY OF THE ANTON GRALL FARM

The Anton Grall Farm was passed down from Anton Grall to son John Grall who married Louisa Kuehnl Grall (1899) and Anna Grimm Sickinger Grall (1919). John passed the farm down to his youngest child, Germaine Grall Tuschl and her husband, Anthony. Their children, Chuck, Ken, and Donna grew up on the farm.

The address of the house is currently 10817 US Highway 10, Cato, WI 54230. Located on the south side of Highway 10, on the east side of Whitelaw, the house, barns, and five acres were sold after the death of Germaine Grall Tuschl in 1998. The farm had been under the ownership of the descendants of Anton and Mary Grall for about 150 years. The remaining 100 acres continues to be owned by Chuck and Ken Tuschl. (2018)

In the 1960's Tony and Germaine renovated the house. It no longer looks like the original farmhouse seen in the photo with the Anton Grall Family. The sturdy barn still stands a testament to quality construction and continued attention to maintenance and preservation.

Germaine loved the farm. She was happiest when she was caring for the cows, tending to the garden, cooking and nurturing her family. A neighbor recalled knowing Germaine when she was a child and wrote a poignant letter:

I know all the Gralls of Whitelaw. I remember seeing an old lady and man at the Grall Farm, (Anton and Mary Lemberger Grall) who lived in part of the farm house. I knew the mother (Louisa Kuehnl Grall) died when Edmund was a baby, and I knew Mayme and walked to school with her. Then one summer us 7th graders had to come to a Saturday wedding mass to sing; and little Mayme was reluctant to be friends with the new stepmother, as we watched on the church steps; her dad (John Grall) married Ms. Sickinger (Anna Grimm Sickinger Grall), this was after the nuptial mass. It was a good marriage, and I remember Germaine; and one day we passed a large load of hay, and on-top John Sr. (John Grall 1877-1961) with a little girl Germaine holding the horses, and he pretending that she was really driving that team. What a wonderful dad he must have been. Hilda Schmatz Wittak

ANTON GRALL (1839-1918)

BIRTH: JULY 25, 1839 Fuchsberg, Rothenbaum, Bohemia

DEATH: APRIL 29, 1918 • Whitelaw, Manitowoc County, Wisconsin

SPOUSE: Anna Maria Lemberger

MARRIAGE: November 21, 1865

DEATH: APRIL 29, 1918 • Whitelaw, Manitowoc County, Wisconsin

BURIAL: St. Michael's Catholic Cemetery, Whitelaw, WI

Left: Hirschau, West Bohemia [Hyršov, Všeruby, Czech Republic] located in the Bohemian Forest, was populated with Bavarian Germans before World War I. This small hamlet, located a few miles from the Germany-Czech border, currently struggles to survive after living under Communist rule for almost half a century. Many Grall ancestors were born here.

Right: All that remains of Fuchsberg, a mile west of Hirschau, and closer to the German-Czech border, is displaced tombstones and a monument to mark the place where Fuchsberg once stood.

Bob Pritzl, who has conducted meticulous genealogical research, claims that Anton Grall was born in the small village of Fuchsberg, Rothenbaum, Bohemia. Rothenbaum is a small village located about one mile east of the Bavarian border in what is now the Czech Republic. Fuchsberg is a small hamlet about 2 miles south of Rothenbaum. Until World War I, this area was part of the Kingdom of Bavaria. At the close of World War II, this area along the German-Czech Republic border was destroyed to install extensive border fortifications.

Hirschau [Hyršov], and Fuchsberg were home to many Grall ancestors. Many of the immigrants to the Whitelaw area claimed to be from Hirschau. There is even a road named Hirschau Road near Whitelaw.

Bob Pritzl also states that Anton Grall had two brothers or half-brothers who immigrated to Wisconsin. The evidence is convincing but no definite proof has been found indicating this to be true. Bob, who passed away in 2009, did not identify the parents of Anton, Johann or George Grall.

Johann Grall (1833-1904) married Barbara Seidl (1837-1913). They owned a farm in the Whitelaw area. Their only son, Ignatz Grall (1867-1949), also farmed in the Whitelaw area.

George Grall (1824-1893) married to Theresia Mayer Grall (1828-1914). George farmed in Kossuth, Manitowoc County, WI until his retirement. George and Theresia retired to Antigo, Langlade County, WI, where they lived with a daughter and her husband.

Haibühl, Cham, Bayern (Bavaria), Germany

The Lemberger families originate in Bayern, the former province of Bavaria, in southeastern Germany, near the current Czech Republic. The family came from the neighboring villages of Lam, Haibühl and Thürnstein, all within three miles of each other. The Regen River flows from the Bohemian Forest through this area, traveling 100 miles to where it empties into the Danube River at Regensburg, Germany.

The surname Lemberger is a place name, likely originating from the village of Lamberg, which is located about 2 miles from Haibühl where the family was documented as living. There is also a mountain village named Lambach, and an even smaller village named Lamberg. Both villages are within 2 miles of Lam, a municipality of about 3,000 inhabitants in the district of Cham in Bavaria in Germany.
